Status Report:

Aside from our group meetings, this week was spent completing the project proposal and then designing an outline for the web application. I wrote the introduction to the project proposal and created a document outlining all of the functional requirements for our application. This document was used as a guideline for the application outline which was completed by the group during our meeting on Tuesday. This outline included a rough sketch of each webpage we will be designing along with all the functionalities facilitated on that page. This outline will serve as a starting point for our requirements document. I also received the data from our client this week and provided it to the rest of the group.
